ABSTRACT

Though the standards derive from a school district's New English Language Arts (ELA) scope and sequence, at least two content areas or disciplines (English and Social Studies) are addressed in this unit of study on Human Rights, and there is ample room for the arts. In particular, the major theoretical framework supporting the unit is Howard Gardner's multiple intelligences theory in service of deep disciplinary understanding. Thus, the unit crosses all eight intelligences and allows room for many other disciplines. It is presented in an easy-to-consult chart style (a curriculum map), with content, skills, assessment, and standards featured in large, bold type. (NKA)

HEROES AND TERRORISTS

ELA for 21st century Schools

TO BE ENLIGHTENED IS TO BE INTIMATE WITH ALL THINGS.
(ADAPTED FROM THE TEACHINGS OF ZEN MASTER DOGEN)

"What is it to wake up to the truth about reality? Is it to realize that we're made of the same subatomic particles as a starfish or the stars? Is it to drop our preoccupation with ourselves and watch the walls between me and you, mine and yours disappear? As our suspicious gaze softens, a clear view of the universe emerges. When we can see past superficial differences, we feel at home where ever we are. The world is no longer a room full of wary strangers but a vast cosmic block party to which everyone—and everything—is invited.

That means thinking about purpose, structure, model cases, and arguments. Translated to generic questions, these become as follows: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. What is it for?</li> <li>2. What is it made of?</li> <li>3. What is it like or unlike?</li> <li>4. Michael Jackson et al will be releasing a single to raise 50 million dollars as relief for families of victims in the attack on our nation. This song and many others such as Sting's "Brand new day" may be folded into the unit.

Also, Time magazine and US News and World Report both published magazines the week of the attack. They contain outstanding graphics and stories to help learners gain more depth.

or object. For example, Miriah Carey's song about a hero illustrates how to think with KAD. Applied to "Hero" Miriah Carey, KAD thinking becomes as follows.

1. Why did Miriah Carey write "Hero?"
2. What key ideas about a hero stand out?
3. How does this song remind you of yourself or someone you know?"
4. What makes this song worth remembering?
5. What new questions about "heroes" shall we ask?

Follow up: Create a practice power point slide show with the KAD questions above. Memorize and perform the song "Hero".

Standard

Write to publish.

Thought demanding task: Write an informational piece about the song "Hero." Specifically, use the knowledge as design questions and answers to construct a power point slide show. Perform the slide show.

Note. If no computer software is available, slide shows can be made with construction paper or white art paper. Slide shows may be illustrated with graphics and music as well.

October

Nonfiction pieces about the terrorist attack on our nation--seek primary documents from USA Today, New York Times, or Washington Post. See newsmagazines such as Time, US News and World Report. Also, see whole TV news video programs available from the stations. See AOL for online coverage and www.time.com.

Standard Read critically.

Point of entry: Open with a KWL or the Starting Block" game from Harvard University's critical squares game) These uncover prior knowledge and generate questions. Then preview the Twin Towers (Time magazine 9-11-01). This is a timeline that explains why the buildings collapsed.

Assess for understanding throughout.
Assess the persuasive essay with Heidi Adrade's rubric for persuasive writing.

	Review the generic knowledge as design questions and create a set of KAD questions specifically for the timeline. These critical thinking questions serve as both an advance organizer and reflection piece. For example, the following KAD questions may be used. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Why did the Time magazine reporters create this timeline?</li> <li>2. What main ideas about the attack on the World Trade center are worth remembering?</li> <li>3. How are these attacks different than any ever experienced in our nation?</li> <li>4. What new questions shall we ask?</li> </ol> Follow the KAD as an advance organizer with several looks at the timeline (e.g., silent reading, read aloud thinking aloud, story map of main idea and details, summarizing main idea and details). Reflect: Use the carousel game to answer each of the above KAD questions. Create and present a power point slide show from the knowledge as design questions and answers. (informational piece)

Research theme: heroes and terrorists in the attack on our nation

Thought demanding task: Write a research paper about heroes and terrorist.

Standard 1:
Students understand how to select and refine a topic.

Eighth grade students will be able to do the following:

- Formulate an essential question
- Use traditional and electronic search tools
- Select appropriate primary and secondary sources
- Take relevant notes from sources and maintain a bibliographic file with MLA style
- Summarize and synthesize relevant information from note cards
- Create an initial draft that includes an introduction, body, and conclusion all focused on a main idea (about an endangered species)
- Revise and edit for publication

Students understand how to present information.

Eighth grade students will be able to do the following:

- Present the relevant information in Standard

	English and to a specific audience <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Use MLA style to cite bibliographic sources</li> <li>• Give effective critical and evaluative stances</li> <li>• Defend a thesis (main idea) to an audience</li> <li>• Use at least one appropriate technology or medium in the defense</li> <li>• Publish the research paper (electronically or hard copy)</li> </ul>	Use the class rubric on research papers to guide assessments of understanding. Use the PA rubric for writing and Adrade's rubric for persuasive writing to guide assessments of understanding in the three types of writing for the PSSA.
April	Note: The mini conference for peers and parents meets the district requirement as a service project. Thought demanding tasks: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Create a mini conference for students to present their research papers before peers and parents.</li> <li>2. Review three types of writing for the PSSA:           <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Informational piece (KAD slide shows)</li> <li>• Persuasive piece</li> <li>• Narrative piece</li> </ul> </li> <li>3. Organize the three pieces, rubrics, and the research paper into a portfolio of best works.</li> </ol>
May	Note: To learn more about the value of creativity in the real world, read Robert Sutton's article "The weird rules of creativity" in the Harvard Business Review. Also, to learn more about classroom uses of the creative problem-solving format (CPSF) do a key word search on the Internet.	Beyond the standards Think imaginatively. Students understand how to think imaginatively about a given topic. Eighth grade students will be able to do the following: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Use a creative problem-solving format to explore a complex problem such as terrorism</li> <li>2. Create a sustainable solution (one that solves a complex problem and benefits future generations)</li> <li>3. Create best, worst, and probable scenarios to see the problem solution set from three perspectives.</li> </ol>

Creative problem solving format (CPSF)

Purpose create a sustainable solution to a complex problem

Structure four stages (each stage requires both creative and critical thinking)

Model case (Sidney Parnes and Paul Torrance have found that the CPSF helps people to think more imaginatively)

Arguments Once learners have a knowledge base, they are prepared to extend their understandings to imaginative thinking.

Simplified CPSF for children

Topic = terrorist attacks on our nation in the 21st century

1. Find the problem (brainstorm; select best ideas; change one best idea into a problem statement: "In what ways might we...?")
2. Find many solutions (brainstorm solutions to the problem statement; select two or three)
3. Find criteria for selecting a best solution (brainstorm criteria; select two or three criteria; add "sustainable" as a key criterion if it is not on the list)

Note. A "sustainable solution" is one that both solves a complex problem and benefits future generations. Such solutions are also likely to be enlightened.

4. Find a plan to put the solution to work (brainstorm possible ideas for plans; create one plan; when possible, close the idea/action gap by putting the plan to work in the real world)

Thought demanding tasks:

1. Write best, worst and probable scenarios about how the complex problem of terrorism might be solved in the 21st century. Publish scenarios

June Extensions	electronically or in hard copy. 2. Create a mini conference to present the scenarios to an audience made of peers and parents. 3. Create a web site that incorporates power point slide shows, persuasive pieces, narrative pieces, research papers, and scenarios. 4. Reflect on the year with knowledge as design.      Why did we study heroes and terrorists?      What ideas and skills did we learn?      What was different about this project?      What was missing from the project?      What new questions about heroes and terrorists might be asked? Note.  During the 2001-2002 school year, I will put this curriculum map online in the IBM Learning Village. Members of the district's ELA team may join me. You can co-create the unit online as a guest. (www.cpi.k12.edu.us/) Let me know about the creative ways you have changed the unit to fit your students.  jerrynewwine@aol.com
